The “psychological rebellion” is children’s deep desire for independence during their development of self awareness, while independence is the basic to build children’s sense of self-worth and self responsibility. We cannot only recognize our children to grow through their physical changes, but we have to give them more support and acceptance for their psychological growth and all the endeavors they made in order to be independent. We should respect children’s self-esteem, value and uniqueness.

Science is the key to open the door of human wisdom. All of the great scientists are the masters of these keys. Experiencing these top end toys and the power of technology is to let the children own one of these keys. Allow their imaginations to fly; light up their eyes; and let them stand on the shoulders of the giants to look into the world and sail their life voyage.

Though the recreation facility looks simple, the content of the design is supported by a great amount of scientific data. How many steps can help people achieve the warm-up effect? How big should the hole of the nets in order to meet the safety requirements while at the same time keep it challenging to children? These are for us to research.
